components for agricultural machinery, food-processing lines and, after 2010, commercial aerospace interiors. The company remains family owned. In 2021 the family sold a 30% stake to an employee stock ownership plan (ESOP), and it describes itself as the largest private manufacturer in its county.

Halvorsen Ridge operates three plants in the Treasure Valley and a distribution center in Salt Lake City. It opened a $60 M automated plant in 2024 and has announced a workforce training center for 2027.

KEY INFORMATION

Ownership: Family owned (70%) with a 30% ESOP; no public filings.

Scale: About 1,650 employees, 1,400 of them in the Treasure Valley; 2025 revenue estimated at $412 M.

Growth: 2024 plant expansion added 280 jobs; a workforce training center is planned for 2027.

Workforce priority: Leadership has spoken publicly about employee mental health and youth career pathways, which align with the client's campus plan.

PRODUCTS AND OPERATIONS

Core Products:

•Agricultural Components: Gearboxes, drive shafts and precision parts for irrigation and harvesting equipment.

•Food-Processing Systems: Stainless conveyors and cutting assemblies for regional processors.

•Aerospace Interiors: Machined seat-frame and galley components for commercial aircraft suppliers.

Key Operations:

•Three Treasure Valley plants plus a Salt Lake City distribution center.

•Halvorsen Ridge Apprenticeship: Two-year paid machinist program run with a local technical college.

VALUES

Built to Last: Long-term family ownership and reinvestment in the region.

People First: Employee ownership, safety and well-being, including an employee assistance program.

Rooted Here: Giving and volunteering where employees live; 40 paid volunteer hours per employee each year.

Key People

Lars Halvorsen

Chairman and Chief Executive Officer

(208) 555-0101 (Office) / lhalvorsen@halvorsenridge.example (Work)

Lars Halvorsen has led Halvorsen Ridge since 1998 and is the founders' son. He holds a BS in Mechanical Engineering and serves on a regional economic development board. He makes the final call on gifts above $50,000 and has publicly described youth mental health as a priority after a family experience. He and his wife are individual donors to several Treasure Valley health organizations.

Dana Okonkwo

President and Chief Operating Officer

(208) 555-0102 (Office) / dokonkwo@halvorsenridge.example (Work)

Dana Okonkwo joined in 2012 from a national equipment maker and became President in 2022. She led the 2024 plant expansion and the planned workforce training center, and she is the executive sponsor of the employee wellness program. She sits on the Corporate Giving Committee.

Michael Pryor

Chief Financial Officer

(208) 555-0103 (Office) / mpryor@halvorsenridge.example (Work)

Michael Pryor has been CFO since 2016 and is a trustee of the Halvorsen Ridge Foundation. He joined the sample client's Finance Committee in 2025, which gives the client a direct internal connection. He reviews every multi-year pledge request for budget fit.

Rosa Alvarado

Director of Community Relations

(208) 555-0193 (Office) / (208) 555-0194 (Mobile) / ralvarado@halvorsenridge.example (Work)

Rosa Alvarado manages sponsorships, the employee volunteer program and the foundation's grant cycle. She is the first contact for every request and prepares committee recommendations. She has managed the client's benefit sponsorship since 2021.

Victor Salas
Vice President of Human Resources
(208) 555-0104 (Office) / vsalas@halvorsenridge.example (Work)

Victor Salas runs the employee assistance program and the matching gift program and sits on the Corporate Giving Committee. He championed the 2025 expansion of counseling benefits for employees' children and is the committee's strongest voice for behavioral health requests. He joined the company in 2015.

Corporate Giving

CORPORATE GIVING

How Halvorsen Ridge gives: Giving runs through three channels, each with its own budget and decision path.

•Sponsorships ($5,000 - $25,000): Event and program sponsorships from the marketing and community budget, approved by the Director of Community Relations. Requests are reviewed monthly.

•Halvorsen Ridge Foundation grants ($10,000 - $100,000): Two grant cycles per year (applications due March 1 and September 1), decided by the five-person Corporate Giving Committee.

•Leadership gifts (above $100,000): Recommended by the committee and approved by the CEO and the family board. Capital gifts may be paid over up to five years.

Giving priorities: Workforce and career pathways for young people, health and behavioral health, and basic needs in communities where employees live. Capital requests are welcome when the project serves employees' families or builds the regional workforce.

Employee programs: Dollar-for-dollar match up to $1,500 per employee per year, Dollars for Doers grants of $500 for 40 volunteer hours, and an annual employee-chosen grant of $20,000.

Recognition: The company prefers naming tied to its workforce (training rooms, career centers) and asks for employee volunteer opportunities as part of large gifts.

Estimated annual giving: About $1.1 M across all channels in 2025 (sponsorships $240,000; foundation grants $610,000; employee match $250,000).

Decision process and timing: First contact goes to Rosa Alvarado. Requests above $100,000 need a site visit with the CEO or COO, a written proposal with budget and outcomes, and a family board vote in May or November. Budgets for the next year are set in October.

Company Affiliations & Findings

COMPANY AFFILIATIONS

Halvorsen Ridge ESOP, Employee ownership trust holding 30% of shares.

Treasure Valley Manufacturers Alliance, Founding member; Lars Halvorsen is a past chair.

Regional Technical College, Apprenticeship partner and equipment donor.

Regional Economic Development Council, Board seat held by the CEO.

RELEVANT FINDINGS

Giving to the client: Ten gifts since 2018. The largest (2023) combined a $25,000 sponsorship and a $15,000 foundation grant for a teen counseling van. Two employees volunteer with the client.

Workforce training center (2027): The company plans a training center for apprentices and local high school students. A youth career-readiness space on the client's campus would line up with this plan.

Employee well-being focus: The 2025 employee report names mental health support for employees' families as a goal and reports expanded counseling benefits. This connects directly to the client's youth behavioral health services.

Foundation grants (2023 - 2025): 37 grants totaling $1.7 M; median grant $25,000; largest $150,000 to a technical college for a welding lab (2024). Four capital grants of $75,000 or more in three years.

Suggested approach: Ask Michael Pryor to introduce the campaign to Lars Halvorsen and Dana Okonkwo, and brief Victor Salas before the committee review. A five-year leadership request of $250,000 - $500,000 for a named youth career and wellness space fits the company's giving pattern and timing. Submit before the May family board meeting.
