What makes Catapult different from a typical fundraising consultant?

Most firms hand you off between vendors: one for planning, another for public-phase calling. Catapult is the only national firm that stays with you from the earliest feasibility study through public-phase calling as one accountable team, with no lost institutional knowledge along the way.

Do you only work with large capital campaigns?

No. We run four distinct programs: Capital Campaign Counsel, Legacy & Planned Giving (Legacy Call), Mid-Level Donor Engagement, and Annual Fund Calling (AF Connect), so we can support an organization at any stage of its donor base, not just during a capital campaign.

How long does a typical capital campaign take?

Feasibility and case development typically run 3–6 months, the quiet phase of major gift solicitation runs 24–36 months, and public-phase calling follows to raise an additional 10–20% of the goal while expanding the donor base.

Who actually makes the calls to our donors?

Trained, client-briefed Engagement Officers who are onboarded to understand your specific mission and case before ever picking up the phone. Every program includes state-of-the-art conferencing and call monitoring, plus on-site training visits.

Does Legacy Call replace our internal planned giving staff?

No. Our Gift Planning Specialists extend your development office rather than replace it, confirming intentions your team is already working and surfacing new prospects your team hasn't found yet, then handing qualified prospects back to your internal team.

What digital outreach is included?

Every engagement, annual fund, and legacy program includes a digital layer at no additional fee: personalized text messaging, ringless voicemail, tailored post-call emails, and (for AF Connect) social media strategy, retargeting, and crowdfunding support.

How do you decide how much to ask each donor for?

Ask amounts are individualized using donor-data analysis and giving-pattern history, typically a five-year giving history for annual fund donors, rather than a flat, one-size-fits-all solicitation amount.

What sectors do you work with?

Faith-based organizations, higher education, human services, arts & culture, healthcare foundations, and youth development: any sector where donor loyalty runs deep and relationships matter more than a single transaction.

How quickly will we hear back after reaching out?

We respond to every inquiry within one business day. Tell us about your goal, timeline, and donor base, and we'll follow up with next steps.
