CASE STUDY · CAPITAL CAMPAIGN & ENDOWMENT

A stalled campaign, a goal that kept rising, and a $10 million finish.

The Salvation Army of Southern Nevada had a half-built campaign, no study to guide it, and construction approval on hold. Catapult ran the study that had been skipped.

The Situation

By spring 2023 the campaign for a new Family Services Center had raised roughly $4 to $4.5 million toward a $6 million goal, and about $800,000 was needed quickly for construction approval. No study had ever been conducted, so there was no independent read on community support, no validated gift chart, and no prospect plan for the balance. The delay itself kept raising the price of the building.

The Solution

Catapult started with the step that had been skipped: a major gifts study in fall 2023, with confidential interviews of community leaders, donors, and prospects, presented that December. From there Catapult rebuilt the campaign around a gift chart whose top ten gifts carried at least 60 percent of the balance, plus wealth screening and research profiles to the $10,000 level, ask amounts and naming opportunities, weekly portfolio work with pre-visit coaching, and a monthly gift-chart-to-actuals report.

What the Study Found

- 100% said the organization was worthy of donations
- 93.1% called its work very important; no one called it unimportant
- 89.7% could name specific programs that mattered to them
- 65.5% believed local corporations and foundations would give
- The barriers were visibility and donor education, not the mission

CONSTRUCTION IN MOBILIZATION

WHY IT WORKED

- The study got done, even late, giving a defensible goal
- Every gift level had a named prospect and an owner
- Once the building was funded, the plan moved to endowment
